

4.0 Faculty, Staff and Students

4.1 Faculty Qualifications. The school shall have a clearly defined faculty which, by virtue of its distribution, multidisciplinary nature, educational preparation, practice experience and research and instructional competence, is able to fully support the school's mission, goals and objectives.

Required Documentation

4.1.a A table showing primary faculty who support degree programs offered by the school. It should present data effective at the beginning of the academic year in which the self-study is submitted to CEPH and should be updated at the beginning of the site visit. See CEPH Data Template 4.1.1.

To meet all three of our goals and accomplish our mission, the College must have a critical mass of well-qualified and productive faculty. In fall 2013, the College has 141 full-time primary faculty members. This number includes 51 faculty members in public health departments. Key qualifications of primary faculty supporting all of the College's degree programs are shown in Table 4.1.a.1. Curricula vitae for the faculty are in the Resource File.

Table 4.1.a.1 Current Primary Faculty Supporting Degree Programs, by Department, Fall 2013

Department	Name	Title/ Academic Rank	Tenure Status	FTE	Grad. Degree	Institution	Discipline	Teaching Area	Research Interest
BSCH	Barnett, Tracey	Assistant Professor	Tenure Track	1.0	PhD, MA	Western Michigan University, Western Michigan University	Sociology; Sociology	Adolescent Health	Adolescent substance use; weight, gender, race/ethnicity
BSCH	Blue, Amy V.	Professor	Tenure Track	1.0	PhD, MA	Case Western Reserve University	Anthropology	Interprofessional education	Education of health professionals
BSCH	Burns, Alba	Associate Professor	Non-Tenure Track	1.0	MD, MS, MD	National University of Nicaragua, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, National University of El Salvador,	Medicine and Surgery, Clinical Tropical Medicine, Doctor in Medicine Incorporated, Cognizant Technical Officer (CTO Certification).	Health Disparities, Program Planning and Evaluation: Tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS	Minority health, Tuberculosis, HIV/AIDS, Mental Health
BSCH	Carnaby, Giselle	Associate Professor	Tenure Track	1.0	PhD, MPH	Curtin University, Western Australia, Curtin University, Western Australia,	Epidemiology; Biostatistics; Speech Pathology	Swallowing Disorders; Cancer rehabilitation; Stroke; Research methodology	Dysphagia; Diabetes; Head/ neck cancer; Stroke
BSCH	Christie, Juliette	Assistant Professor	Non-Tenure Track	1.0	PhD, MA	University of Georgia, University of Georgia	Communication, Psychology	Community-based Participatory Research	Psychosocial aspects of oncology and infectious disease
BSCH	Curbow, Barbara	Professor & Chair	Tenured	1.0	PhD, MA	University of California, Santa Cruz University of California, Santa Barbara,	Educational Psychology; Social Psychology	SBS Core Courses; Health Comm.	Psychosocial Oncology; Occupational Health Psychology; Behavior Change; Treatment Decision-making
BSCH	Moorhouse, Michael	Research Assistant Scientist	Non-Tenure Track	1.0	PhD, MHS	University of Florida, University of Florida	Rehabilitation Science	Rehabilitation Counseling, Addictions	Measurement, Tobacco Cessation, Traumatic Brain Injury, Risky Behaviors, Clinical Supervision, Disability
BSCH	Noel-Thomas, Shalewa	Assistant Professor	Non-Tenure Track	1.0	PhD, MPH	University of South Florida, University of South Florida	Public Health, Public Health	Public Health Program Planning and Implementation; HIV/AIDS; Chronic Disease Prevention; Health Disparities.	Workforce development, HIV/AIDS
BSCH	Pomeranz, Jamie	Associate Professor	Non-Tenure Track	1.0	PhD, MHS, MSESS	University of Florida, University of Florida, University of Florida	Rehabilitation Science; Rehabilitation Counseling; Exercise Science	Vocational Services; Occupational Aspects; Psychosocial Aspects; Practicum	Life Care Planning; Health Literacy; Rasch Measurement; Spinal Cord Injury

Educational Attainment of Primary Faculty. The educational attainment of primary faculty is presented in Table 4.1.a.2. All of the public health faculty and 89% of the total faculty hold doctoral degrees.

Table 4.1.a.2 Educational Attainment of Primary Faculty, Fall 2013

Gender and Tenure Status. Information pertaining to the tenure status and gender of primary faculty is presented in Table 4.1.a.3. Among public health faculty, 47% (24) are female and 60.8% (31) are tenured or tenure track. In the College, 55.3% are female and 48.9% are tenured or tenure track. The proportion of male public health faculty who hold tenure (19.6%) is twice that of females (9.8%) who hold tenure, although the proportions in the tenure track are closer: male 19.6%, female 11.8%. These relative differences are similar to those of the College. However, among the faculty of the College as a whole, 51.1% are non-tenure track, while 39.2% of public health faculty are non-tenure track. The clinical departments in the college have many faculty members who teach in clinical settings. In the public health departments, non-tenure track faculty members are in classroom teaching or research roles. In recent years, the College has hired some promising faculty members with recent PhDs into the research track to give them an opportunity to establish their research programs before entering the tenure track. This practice has contributed to the success of junior faculty in achieving the levels of distinction required for tenure and promotion to associate professor at UF.

Representation of Disciplines in Public Health; Faculty Trained and Experienced in the Discipline They Teach. The discipline areas for all graduate degrees earned by public health faculty are listed in Table 4.1.a.4. As evidenced by the listings in the tables, public health faculty members have graduate degrees applicable to their respective concentration areas.

*Represents multiple degrees for individual faculty members.

In addition, many faculty in other departments in the College have graduate degrees in public health or disciplines that are directly supportive of public health and often found among faculty in schools of public health, including: clinical psychology, psychology, rehabilitation psychology, experimental psychology, neuropsychology, developmental psychology, counseling psychology, educational psychology, anthropology, education, exercise physiology, counseling, exercise science, counselor education, physiology, and nutrition and food science. Other areas of the health professions - Speech, Language and Hearing Sciences, Occupational Therapy, and Physical Therapy - include faculty whose areas of research directly overlap with those of public health faculty (e.g., behaviors associated with hearing loss in adolescents) and who offer students a broader range of content and methods expertise than is often found in schools of public health.

Representation of Instructional Concentrations. The teaching areas of public health faculty found in Table 4.1.a.1 are summarized in Table 4.1.a.5. There is ample coverage of core content in each of the MPH concentrations and the PhD disciplines. As indicated in criterion 1.7, the number of faculty in each concentration supports acceptable student/faculty ratios.

Quality of Teaching. All teaching faculty are evaluated at the conclusion of a course. The course evaluation includes 15 items that are rated on a scale of 1 (low quality) to 5 (high quality). A review of summary evaluations for each instructor and course(s) taught was conducted, and ratings were categorized as ≤ 3.5 and > 3.5 . These summaries are presented in Table 4.1.a.6 for academic years 2010-2011 through 2012-2013. Further information about the course evaluation assessment is in Criterion 4.2.d and the Resource File. Over 85% of the public health instructors/courses and College instructors/courses attained ratings above 3.5 across all years.

Faculty's Ability to Supervise Students in Research and Practice. Faculty members' ability to supervise students in research and practice is clearly related to their own success in these areas. As discussed in Criterion 3.1, faculty members in the College are actively engaged in funded research, and the overall level of funded research has grown steadily over the past 10 years. Another indicator of excellence in research is the faculty's commitment to communicating findings through scientific and professional presentations and publications. Faculty productivity on these measures is shown in Table 3.1.d.1.

Faculty's Experience and Competence in Public Health Practice. Among public health primary faculty, 51.1% have public health practice experience at some point in their professional careers. Moreover, in the college as a whole, 40.4% have public health practice experience. Public service activities are discussed under criterion 3.2 and listed in Table 3.2.c.1. Close to 40% of college faculty engaged in public service activities in 2012-13.

Involvement of Public Health Practitioners. Public health practitioners are involved in the educational mission of the College in four ways: teaching courses; supervising students during internships; delivering invited talks, and serving on the Public Health Advisory Committee. Qualifications of these adjunct, affiliate, part-time and courtesy faculty members can be found in Table 4.1.b.1.

Faculty's Ability to Ensure Students Get a Broad Public Health Perspective. Students are ensured a broad public health perspective by having faculty members who:

- Are trained in their disciplinary areas of concentration (Table 4.1.a.4)
- Teach an appropriate array of courses for their areas of concentration (Table 4.1.a.5)
- Have ongoing research careers (Table 3.1.d.1)
- Have backgrounds in public health practice and
- Engage in current public health activities

These qualifications are augmented by having additional faculty who are public health practitioners, and by having public health practitioners serve as guest speakers and as supervisors for practica and internships, as discussed above.

Awards and Honors. The scholarship of the faculty of the College has been recognized through honors and awards, both within and outside the University, as Table 4.1.a.7 illustrates.

Table 4.1.a.7 Primary Faculty Honors and Awards, 2010-11 through 2012-13

4.1.b If the school uses other faculty in its teaching programs (adjunct, part-time, secondary appointments, etc.), summary data on their qualifications should be provided in table format, organized by department, specialty area or other organizational unit as appropriate to the school. See CEPH Data Template 4.1.2.

A full description of other faculty (N=85) who support the instructional programs of the College is presented in Table 4.1.b.1. The supporting faculty represent a broad array of practice qualifications that enrich the educational experiences of the students.

4.1.c Description of the manner in which the faculty complement integrates perspectives from the field of practice, including information on appointment tracks for practitioners, if used by the school. Faculty with significant practice experience outside of that which is typically associated with an academic career should also be identified.

The faculty members of the College infuse public health practice into their research, service and teaching experiences. The College makes every effort to recruit primary and supporting faculty with practice experience in addition to their potential for research and teaching. The College encourages the participation of adjunct, guest and consulting practitioners from the field through adjunct teaching positions, clinical positions, and invited guest lectures in courses. Students are also encouraged to become involved in such outreach activities as the Rural South Public Health Training Center, which conducts ongoing assessments of workforce needs in the medically underserved counties in northern Florida and assists local health departments with various projects intended to address community needs while enriching the skills of public health practitioners. In Gainesville and Jacksonville, students are also engaged in various community projects supported by HealthStreet. Student engagement in both contexts includes internships, volunteer or paid assistantships, and coursework. For example, students in courses on community-based participatory research and community assessment and surveillance have recently participated in full course projects that were developed and conducted in collaboration with the Rural South Public Health Training Center.

Non tenure-accruing positions in adjunct, courtesy, and clinical categories are available in the College. Adjunct and courtesy appointments are offered to practitioners. Clinical appointments are often used by the public health departments in the college for faculty whose primary responsibilities are teaching and community engagement. The College has clear guidelines for promotion in non-tenure-accruing tracks. The guidelines are posted on the college website at http://facstaff.phhp.ufl.edu/services/humanresources/Faculty/Tenure_and_promotion_index.htm.

In addition, faculty members incorporate a practice perspective into specific courses and student experiences. For example, in the Social and Behavioral Sciences MPH concentration, all students take a series of three courses that are practice oriented: assessment and surveillance; program planning and evaluation; and health communication. Each of these courses builds skills that students can use immediately within the workplace in the development of community-based interventions and evaluations. The other concentrations offer similar “hands-on” experiences that prepare students for practice in their disciplines.

4.1.d Identification of measureable objectives by which the school assesses the qualifications of its faculty complement, along with data regarding the performance of the school against those measures for each of the last three years.

The outcome measures we have selected for judging faculty qualifications are in Table 4.1.d.1. These measures reflect key elements of faculty education, scholarship, leadership, and practice. The five year targets reflect our intention to maintain a strong, doctorally-prepared faculty to support our research goal, while assuring a solid complement of faculty members with practice experience to enrich our teaching and service goals.

4.1.e Assessment of the extent to which the criterion is met and an analysis of the school’s strengths, weaknesses and plans relating to this criterion.

This criterion is met.

Strengths:

1. Both primary and supporting faculty have a range of educational and professional backgrounds to support the mission, goals, and objectives set forth by the College.
2. The distribution of primary faculty across tenured and tenure-track categories allows for a pipeline of junior faculty to move into senior ranks and adequate senior faculty to provide leadership and mentoring.
3. The strengths of the primary faculty include their high levels of involvement in research and practice and their dedication to excellence in teaching.
4. Other faculty members who support our instructional programs bring unique backgrounds that enrich the educational experiences of the students.

Weaknesses:

None identified.

Plans:

1. Continue to hire and retain highly qualified faculty members.
2. As appropriate, continue to hire faculty starting their academic careers into research track positions to establish their research programs.
