Geraldine Weinstein

Public Health Practice

(Online)

Sincere gratitude to the MPH online faculty and staff who were always there to assist in all of my needs.

Geraldine Weinstein, DDS started her journey through the MPH while she was on faculty at the University of Florida School of Dental Medicine. She has since moved to the University of Connecticut where she is an Associate Professor in residence in the Division of General Dentistry. She has authored a number of articles in clinical dentistry and is currently editor in chief of Springer's Clinical Dentistry Reviewed Journal. Her clinical interests are in digital dentistry. However, she looks forward to integrating her MPH into establishing programs to improve Oral healthcare.

How has your University of Florida MPH helped you achieve your goals?

My MPH has helped me see a different side of Dentistry and health in general. I think focusing on the broader discipline of prevention and health education was an essential missing piece to my Dental career as an educator. The MPH has certainly given me tools to expand on that.

What are your plans after graduation?

After receiving my MPH, I will continue to work as a dental educator with a whole lot of new tools in my belt thanks to the MPH education!
